Personal Statement

I started playing softball at 7 and it has become such an important piece of my life. Softball is more than a game. Softball teaches life skills and lessons. It has increased my confidence and helped build my leadership skills. It has taught me discipline and that you sometimes have to make sacrifices for what you really want. Softball showed me how to handle losses or failure gracefully and that sometimes you just need to pause, take a deep breath to come back stronger. Softball highlights the significance of character, trust, and dependability. It has shown what you're willing to fight for, challenge your limits for, and devote your whole self to, can create pathways to achieving your dreams. I have prepared myself for, dedicated myself to, and practiced discipline to realize my goal in playing softball at the highest collegiate level. Even on the rough days, when I am tired and exhausted, I am proud to be a softball player.
